Geese Snelling and some others chopped down a tree on White Oak last week and found in the hollow a dead squirrel around which the bees had stored their honey. The intruding squirrel had evidently been stung to death by the bees and they were not able to get him out of the beehive. Owingville Outlook.

Frankfort, Ky., June 6.—Governor Beckham to-day appointed James S. Morris, of Frankfort as special Judge of the Wolfe Circuit Court to try Walter R. Day, formerly Republican State Treasurer, for obtaining money under false pretenses, he having been indicted in that county as well as in Breathitt.

While at the Danville courthouse, in conference with friends, County Judge R. S. Nickols, of Boyle county, fell dead Friday night. For a quarter of a century he had been the leader of the Democrats of his county. His sudden end caused a great shock.

By a majority of 229 the citizens of Bowling Green voted in favor of prohibition, the "drys" carrying every precinct but one. The women of the city took an active part in the election, being present at every polling place. Ten arrests were made on charges of bribery or intimidation, but bail was furnished promptly.

Campton, Ky., June 7. Peter Stricklin, who last Saturday shot and killed Mat Sloan, his brother-in-law, at Lee City, this county, was this morning acquitted in an examining trial before County Judge Center, the proof showing that Sloan was under the influence of whiskey and had gone to the home of Stricklin and was attempting to kill him.

GEORGETOWN, Ky., June 7. — Little Willie Bean, the three-year-old son of W. S. Bean, a carpenter, at noon today took arsenical strychnia tablets by accident, dying within a few minutes. His father kept a bottle of the tablets on a shelf out of reach and used them for nervousness. The son evidently climbed up, and licking the sugar-coated stuff, nearly emptied the bottle down his throat.

Cynthiana, Ky., June 6.—A reunion of the members of Capt. Shawhan's company, who saw service in the Mexican War, was held in this city today. Sixty-one years after they first started for the battlefield, only seven out of a company of ninety-eight are living. All seven were present. A banquet was given them at the Commercial Hotel. The following answered the roll call: W. S. Chesney, St. Louis, Mo.; Joseph Walter, of Alabama; David Ross, Mt. Olive, Ky.; James Warford, Millersburg; George Givens, Wesley Smith, Thomas Miller, Harrison county.

Twenty-one lives were lost when a cloudburst struck the little town of Grayville, in Adair county, Friday, and it may be that more bodies will be found in the wreckage of the houses swept away. A wall of water swept down the narrow banks of a small creek and overwhelmed those houses which were built close to the stream. In the path of the cloud burst fences were washed away and growing crops torn up, fields being left entirely bare. State Senator Neil was the only one of his family to escape death, his wife and five children being drowned or killed. Monday was a day of funerals, and the supply of coffins had to be renewed before all the dead could be buried.

The forest service has recently published a series of forest planting leaflets dealing with a number of trees that are adaptable to cultivation in Kentucky and other States of the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys. Among the trees dealt with are the yellow poplar, osage orange, black walnut, coffee tree, white willow, box elder, white ash, holly catalpa, black cherry, sugar maple and green ash. Several of these, notably the black walnut and others, the forest service experts say, thrive best of all in Kentucky and the more Northern Ohio Valley States. The leaflets describe the locations that are best methods of planting and cultivating the economic value of different trees and other points of interest to persons intending to undertake forest cultivation for immediate profit or for the benefit of posterity. The service is anxious to arouse interest generally in the subject of reforesting our country and it is meeting with considerable success.

Frankfort, Ky., June 6. — Lee Holder, aged 17, who has been under trial at Union City, Madison Co., for the murder of his father, near here several months ago, and who was found guilty, was today sentenced by Judge Jones to be hanged July 12. He is the youngest man ever sentenced to death in this section. While his father was returning home from a lodge meeting in town, young Holder crept up behind him and shot him in the back with a shotgun. As the old man lay dying at his feet, begging for mercy, the Holder boy beat his brains out with the stock of his gun. On his return home, he attempted the wholesale murder of the family by poison, but physicians saved them. A new trial was applied for, but refused. Attorney General Caldwell, of Tennessee, prosecuted Holder.
